Presentation Effects

Effects can be applied throughout the presentation to create interest and illustrate key points in the content.

Animations

Animations can be applied throughout presentations to create interest and provide information in sections/chunks. A commonly used animation is the Fade-In of bullet points, allowing the speaker to focus on one point at a time.

Animations should be used sparingly to avoid distracting the audience from the content of the presentation.

Animation Timing

Animations should have timing set when the presentation will be viewed online or played on a loop.

Animations can have timing applied when they occur in a group and do not affect the pace of the presentation. Animations should not be timed when the speaker needs to deliver information in between each animation (to allow the speaker to set the pace of the presentation).

Transitions

Transitions can be applied for all slides or specific actions/slides. When applying transitions to all slides, the transition selected must be simple to avoid distractions (such as Fade, Fly, Cut, Push, Uncover, or Cube).

When applying transitions to only a few slides, more dramatic transitions can be used (such as Zoom, Honeycomb, Vortex, or Dissolve). Examples of actions/specific slides transition can be used for, include:

- Transitions to Section Heading
- Transitions to “15 Minute Break” slide (or similar)
- Transition to “Thank you for listening/watching” slide

Transition Timing

Transitions should be set to move to a new slide On-Click for face-to-face presentations to allow the speaker to set the pace of the presentation.

Video clips

Video clips can be used in presentations when, they are directly relevant to the content and requested by the speaker. Videos should be sized to fit the full slide screen (or as much as possible; without stretching) to ensure the audience can see the video clearly.

Play Back Timing

Videos may be set to play automatically in presentations which will be viewed online or played on a loop. In face-to-face presentations videos should be set to start On-Click to allow the presenter to set the pace of the presentation.

Sounds

Sounds can be used in presentations when, they are directly relevant to the content and they add value to the viewing experience. Sounds should be used sparingly to avoid distracting the audience and interfering with the speaker's verbal delivery.

Music

Music may be set in the background of presentations which will be viewed online or played on a loop. Music should not be used for face-to-face presentations to avoid interfering with the speaker's verbal delivery (unless specifically requested by the speaker for a specific part of the presentation)
