Document Production Policy and Procedure

Policy Statement

My Department Stores is committed to producing clear, easy to understand information that is useful to staff and customers.

Safe Work Practices

Staff are required to use safe work practices when designing and producing documents, presentations, spreadsheets and completing other computer based tasks.

Ergonomics

Before beginning any process to produce documents, presentations, spreadsheets or complete other computer based tasks, staff must complete the My Department Stores Ergonomics Checklist from www.myworkplaces.com.au/b7s42

Workstations should be set up and used as follows:

- Chair is adjusted so that:
    - Elbows can rest at right-angles
    - Arms are slightly higher than your desk
    - Legs are square at the knees
    - Feet are flat on the floor
    - Chair backrest is adjusted so that back is straight and lower back is well supported
- Desk height is adjusted so that:
    - Arms, when seated and held at right angles, are just above the desk.
    - There is good clearance between the bottom edge of the desk and your legs
- Monitor is positioned:
    - At least half a metre away from your seated position
    - With the top of the screen in line with your eyes or just below
- If a document holder is used, it is positioned below or to the side of the monitor (but not between the monitor and keyboard)
- Keyboard is positioned:
    - As close as practical to the front of the desk
    - So that when typing the top of the hand, wrist and forearm are in a straight line
- Mouse is positioned:
    - Directly next to your keyboard
    - So that when using the mouse wrists are straight and supported by the desk

Work Organisation

Staff are expected to manage their time and tasks when using computers for long periods to ensure they reduce their risk of injury and strain.

Staff should use the following work organisation techniques:

- Organise tasks to ensure there is a break from computer use computer for at least 10 minutes every hour (for example leaving your computer to copy a document, make a phone call, etc.)
- Look away from the computer to rest the eyes every 10-15 minutes
- Take work breaks (e.g. lunch) at least every four hours

Environmental Sustainability

Resource Conservation Techniques
Staff should use the following resource conservation techniques during their work practices, to reduce paper usage and waste:
- Print hard copies of electronic information should only be printed when absolutely necessary (electronic copies of documents should be distributed when possible)
- When possible on the equipment being used, all printing and photocopies should be double sided
- Single sided documents which do not contain confidential information should be reused for rough drafts or notes
- Documents which do not contain confidential information should be recycled
- Ink and toner cartridges should be recycled

Energy Conservation Techniques
Staff should conserve energy during their work practices, using the following techniques:
- Whenever possible, turn off non-essential lighting
- Whenever possible, turn off computers or other devices when not in use
- Whenever possible, use the power-save settings on computers or other devices and equipment
- Always select energy saving temperatures on air-conditioners
- Whenever equipment and devices such as screens, computers and printers are not in use they should be put into sleep mode

Document Production Software

My Department Stores provides Microsoft Office (MS) Suite on all of its computers and prefers that staff use the MS product range to ensure that all business documents are compatible. This includes:
- MS Word; word processing
- MS Excel; spreadsheet design
- MS PowerPoint; electronic presentations
- MS Access; database design
- MS Publisher; brochure/similar design

When necessary, Mac products may be used (Pages, Numbers, Keynote and similar).

Structuring Documents

Documents should be structured logically to provide a clear flow of information. Formatting should be used to segment documents and highlight important information.
Identifying Document Inclusions

A range of inclusions may be used when structuring a document. The following are common examples which should be used in certain situations:

- Cover page is used on longer formal documents
- Table of Contents is used when there are several sections and headings in a document (generally not suitable for short documents with less than three (3) pages)
- Body Text is used in most documents when paragraphs or several sentences of text are used to convey a message
- References are used when citations are made in any document
- Index is used on longer formal documents to assist with navigation
- Attachments should be used only on emails when other documents need to be attached to the email
- Active hyperlinks are used whenever a website is included in text
- Data entry fields should be used on forms, templates and other documents where the user is asked to record information

Segmenting Documents

Factsheets, brochures, polices, and similar longer format documents should generally be broken up into sections to allow the reader to review and process small pieces of information at a time. Sections should be created to deal with each separate topic in a document (this policy can be reviewed as an example). Sections should be given headings to allow the reader to easily scan the document for information.

Forms and templates should be broken up into short sections with headings when possible, to group similar information into categories. Common examples of categories include:

- Customer Details or Staff Details (which would contain any general and contact information fields)
- Request Details, Complaint Details, Hazard Details, Enquiry Details, etc. (which would contain fields and longer/free text fields or questions about the details of the enquiry/request or event being described on the form)
- Approval, Manager Details, Outcome, etc. (which would contain any fields required to approve or close off the enquiry/request or event being described on the form)

Letters should include the following sections:

- Date, which should be written as month, day and year, for example, January 1 2000
- Senders address: Include senders email and organisation. If this information is already in the company letterhead then it is not required.
- Recipient name, title and address: Use full name and title eg: Mr, Mrs. Salutation: This is usually "Dear" followed by the recipient's full name.
- Body, which should be formatted with lines between paragraphs or using other techniques to create 'white-space' in the email
- Sign off, which should include a sign off such as "Kind regards", the senders name, role and the business name

Emails and memos and similar communications which are less than 500 words should be segmented using a different approach. The email should contain:

- Subject, which should clearly communicate the main point of the email
- Body, which should be formatted with lines between paragraphs or using other techniques to create 'white-space' in the email
- Sign off, which should include a sign off such as "Kind regards", the senders name, role and the business name

Sequencing Documents

Documents should be sequenced in an easily understood order to make it easy for the reader to process the information in the document and navigate to find key information.

Most documents should include an introduction, body and conclusion (forms are often an exception to this rule).

Documents should be structured clearly and logically, with each topic flowing to the next.

Developing a Communication Method

A communication method should be developed/decided on for each document being created. The communication method is made up of a selected style and tone.

Style

Style refers to the level of formality that is used within the text of a document. The three (3) main styles which should be used are:

- Formal
- Standard (semi-formal)
- Informal

Tone

In the context of writing document, tone is expressed through the level of formality, syntax and opinion within the writing. When developing a tone for a document, a series of descriptors should be selected which reflect the purpose of the document, the needs of the audience and the style of the document.

The following examples can be used.

Tone Descriptors	Purpose best served	Audience needs which best met		Styles which best align
		Customers	Staff	Formal	Standard	Informal

References

References are used to cite the source of information, images, data or other elements of a document.

American Psychological Association (APA) referencing style should be used.

References can be generated using the Cite This For Me tool at http://www.citethisforme.com/au.

In text citations should be used, with full references added a Footnotes or Endnotes.

Timelines

Documents should be developed in the timeframe set by the manager, author, speaker or other person requesting the document. When timeframes may not be achievable this should be reported to the person requesting the document as soon as possible and a new deadline negotiated or assistance requested.

Reviewing Document Quality

Documents should be reviewed to ensure they meet their intended purpose, are clear and meet high writing standards.

Checking Spelling, Grammar and Punctuation
Spelling, grammar and punctuation should be checked regularly during the development of the draft and final version of the document. My Department Stores recommends using the built-in spell check functions of word processing, spreadsheet and other document production software.

Checking Spelling, Grammar and Punctuation Process
The following steps should be completed when checking document spelling, grammar and punctuation (based on MS software):
1. Navigate to the spell check function (in Microsoft applications, click on the Review Ribbon)
2. Click on the Spelling and Grammar button
3. Review each error found and select a correction
4. Save the document when complete

My Department Stores Document Production Policy and Procedure

Proofreading

A complete check of document drafts should be completed by the person who developed the draft as a manual proofread. A supervisor/manager or colleague should also be engaged to proofread the document and provide feedback.

Manual Proofreading Process

The following steps should be completed when proofreading documents:
1. Begin at the beginning of the document
2. Review each line of text checking the spelling, grammar, punctuation and flow of the text
3. Check the document formatting is consistent (e.g. the same fonts and sizes of text being used)
4. Circle any errors identified and note the correction that should be made
5. Record your name and the date of the proofreading on the document

Reviewing Tone, Readability, Structure, Sequencing and Formatting

The tone, readability, structure, sequencing and formatting of draft documents should be reviewed by the person who developed the draft.

Reviews can be completed formally and documented (the following review checklist can be used to support this process) or informally as a thought exercise or conversation with a supervisor/manager.

Document Approvals

Some documents require approval before they can be distributed to staff and/or customers:
- Staff communications about business changes and goals/project launches must be approved by the manager of the staff member preparing the document/communication
- Forms must be approved by the manager of the Department that will process/use the form (e.g. HR Manager, IT Manager, Customer Service Manager, etc.)
- Factsheets and staff training materials must be approved by the manager of the Department that is releasing the information, providing training or who would be responsible for answering staff questions and providing assistance (e.g. HR Manager, IT Manager, Customer Service Manager, etc.)

Saving and Storing Documents

Information may be stored on the My Department Stores server, or using an online file sharing platform. My Department Stores staff may use Box; www.box.com, Dropbox; www.dropbox.com, or Google Docs; https://docs.google.com/.

File Naming Conventions
All documents should be saved using the following file naming convention:

My Department Stores Document Production Policy and Procedure
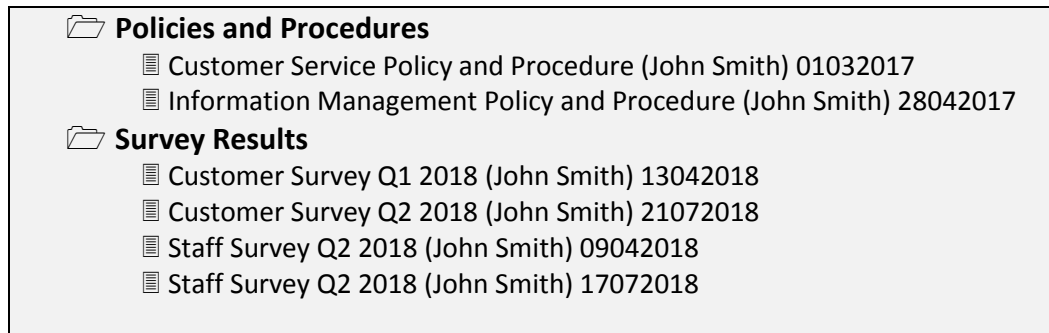

[File Name] ([Author Name]) [DDMMYYYY]

For example:

Customer Survey Results (John Smith) 04072018

Folders

Information should be organised into folders when it is stored on the My Department Stores server, or using an online file sharing platform. Folders should be named so that it is easy for staff to identify what information will be contained in each folder.

For example:

> 📁 Policies and Procedures
> 　　📄 Customer Service Policy and Procedure (John Smith) 01032017
> 　　📄 Information Management Policy and Procedure (John Smith) 28042017
> 📁 Survey Results
> 　　📄 Customer Survey Q1 2018 (John Smith) 13042018
> 　　📄 Customer Survey Q2 2018 (John Smith) 21072018
> 　　📄 Staff Survey Q2 2018 (John Smith) 09042018
> 　　📄 Staff Survey Q2 2018 (John Smith) 17072018

Storing Information Procedure

The following steps should be completed when storing information:
1. Set up an organised Folder structure to save files into
2. Set passwords for folders (when applicable)
3. Redact any private information from documents (when applicable)
4. Save files using My Department Stores File Naming Conventions
5. Move files into the most relevant folders

Producing Text Based Documents Procedure

The following four (4) processes should be completed when producing text based documents:
1. Plan Document Production Procedure
2. Draft Document Production Procedure
3. Review and Proofread Draft Documents Procedure
4. Produce Final Documents Procedure

1. Plan Document Production Process

The following steps should be completed when planning text based documents:

A. Identify the document purpose and audience
B. Plan the format, formatting requirements, structure and sequencing of the document
C. Develop a communication method for the document,
D. Select the technology/software to be used to develop the document
E. Identify the approval requirements for the document

2. Draft Document Production Process

The following steps should be completed when drafting text based documents:

A. Draft the document in the planned format
B. Use the planned technology/software
C. Use the planned structure
D. Include all of the planned key points
E. Use the planned formatting techniques and style and tone
F. Save the document draft using the File Naming Conventions followed by "V1"

3. Review and Proofread Draft Documents Process

The following steps should be completed when reviewing and proofreading document drafts:

A. Organise for a supervisor/manager or colleague to proofread the document
B. Complete a manual review of the documents spelling and grammar (refer to Manual Proofreading Process)
C. Review the tone, readability, structure, sequencing and formatting of the drafted document (refer to Reviewing Tone, Readability, Structure, Sequencing and Formatting)
D. Request feedback from the person who requested the development of the document about whether any new or changed information should be added
E. Plan changes to be made based on reviews and new information

4. Produce Final Documents Process

The following steps should be completed when producing final text based documents:

A. Make the planned changes to the document
B. Complete a manual review of the updated documents spelling and grammar (in particular reviewing any new/changed information)
C. Save the final document using the File Naming Conventions followed by "V2"
D. Store the final document on the My Department Stores server or an online file sharing platform (refer to Storing Information Procedure)
E. Distribute the final version of the document to the person who requested its development
